16 | Career breaks

Starting point

3

Possible response

For the employee, the career break will be expensive and the person will need to anticipate reduced (or no) earnings and therefore a change in their spending. They may also find that they miss the routine life more than they expected. Ideally, the employee will take the break and return to the same employer. However, this means the employer needs someone to temporarily replace the person and possibly pay for retraining.

1 voluntary organization / charity
2 revitalized grateful for
3 put off / postpone
4 perspective / outlook
5 appreciate / feel grateful for
6 piece of advice / tip
1 because the industry was having a bit of a downturn
2 because a lot of their work is project-based and consultants work for different lengths of time on projects
3 cost savings, improves staff retention rate, a chance for staff to broaden horizons, a way to attract new staff
4 The employee learns new skills which the company also benefits from. He or she also has renewed motivation.

Business communication skills

I've been a loyal employee.
I'll be more motivated after the trip.
I'll gain experience I can bring to the company.
It's a lifelong ambition of mine.

Practically speaking

1 did DIY jobs
2 went on a spa break
3 visited family and played golf

Possible responses

1 Employees would develop management and leadership skills in difficult or new types of conditions. They would also experience working with new cultures.

2 Companies would benefit from the new skills their employees acquired. This type of project would provide very positive publicity for the business. It would also develop knowledge of potentially new markets.

3 The experience gained: new skills, more confident, knows he can achieve things on his own, making decisions, knowledge and cultural awareness.

The benefits for the company: the consultant believes his new skills will benefit the company though he doesn't say exactly how. He also refers to the knowledge and cultural awareness that he's developed which will be of benefit to the company in the future.
